NORTH SIKKIM

1. Lachung – Gateway to North Sikkim | Alpine Valleys, Apple Orchards & Himalayan Village Life

Lachung is a picturesque Himalayan village located in the Mangan district of North Sikkim at an altitude of approximately 2,700 metres (8,858 ft). Nestled amidst snow-capped mountains, alpine forests, rushing rivers, and colourful rhododendron valleys, Lachung is one of the most popular mountain destinations in Sikkim and serves as the gateway to Yumthang Valley, Zero Point (Yumesamdong), and Katao. The name "Lachung" translates to "Small Pass" in the local Bhutia language, reflecting its historic location along ancient Himalayan trade routes that once connected the remote mountain regions of Sikkim with Tibet.

Situated on the banks of the pristine Lachung Chu River, Lachung offers breathtaking views of the Eastern Himalayas, traditional wooden houses, Buddhist monasteries, apple orchards, rich biodiversity, and warm Himalayan hospitality. Surrounded by towering peaks, alpine meadows, cascading waterfalls, and dense coniferous forests, the village transforms into a spectacular destination throughout the year—from colourful rhododendron blooms in spring and lush green valleys during summer to crystal-clear mountain views in autumn and snow-covered landscapes in winter.

Recognised as the tourism lifeline of North Sikkim, Lachung serves as the base for exploring some of the state's most iconic attractions while preserving its authentic mountain culture and peaceful village atmosphere. Unlike many crowded hill stations, Lachung has successfully retained its traditional charm, offering visitors a perfect blend of nature, culture, adventure, spirituality, and high-altitude Himalayan experiences. Whether you are seeking scenic beauty, wildlife, photography, trekking, or a relaxing mountain retreat, Lachung provides one of the finest travel experiences in the Eastern Himalayas.

- Famous For: Snowfields, High-Altitude Landscapes, Himalayan Views, Frozen Streams, Adventure & Photography

History, Geography & Climate

Zero Point has historically been part of the remote Himalayan frontier and lies close to the Indo-China border. Due to its strategic location and extreme altitude, the region remains under restricted access and can only be visited with the necessary permits. Today, it is one of North Sikkim's most popular high-altitude destinations, attracting visitors from across the country.

The region experiences an extreme alpine climate with cold temperatures throughout the year. Summers remain cool, while winters bring heavy snowfall, freezing temperatures, and icy landscapes. Even during warmer months, patches of snow often remain visible, and weather conditions can change rapidly.

Zero Point's Three Tourism Zones

Snowfield Zone

The main attraction of Zero Point features vast snow-covered landscapes, frozen streams, and open alpine terrain, making it a paradise for snow lovers and photographers.

High-Altitude View Zone

This section offers breathtaking panoramic views of snow-capped Himalayan peaks, rugged mountain ridges, and dramatic high-altitude scenery.

Alpine Frontier Zone

Located near the end of the motorable road, this zone showcases barren alpine landscapes, glacial surroundings, and the pristine wilderness of North Sikkim.

Biodiversity & Wildlife

Zero Point lies within the Eastern Himalayan Biodiversity Hotspot, although vegetation becomes sparse due to the extreme altitude. The surrounding region supports alpine grasses, dwarf shrubs, mosses, lichens, and seasonal wildflowers.

Wildlife includes:

- Himalayan Marmot
- Himalayan Blue Sheep
- Yak
- Snow Pigeon

- Blood Pheasant
- Himalayan Birds
- Butterflies and Alpine Insects
- Small Alpine Mammals

Culture & Local Life

Zero Point itself has no permanent settlements because of its harsh climate and extreme altitude. The nearby villages of Lachung and surrounding Himalayan communities preserve the traditional Bhutia culture, with livelihoods based on tourism, yak rearing, and mountain agriculture. Visitors experience warm Himalayan hospitality before travelling to this high-altitude frontier.
